Group Reflection

I think that one of the things that went well was having someone that stepped up as a leader. This led to things getting organised and someone who followed up on our group's task. Also, one of our members were quick to make up a website. I guess one of the things that could be improved was the communication platform that we used. In all fairness, this was my first time using that platform and was confused at first, but I quickly got used to the features, so It was all fine. I think it would've been better if I quickly got on to the tasks that I have chosen to do. I think this set the team a little bit behind. Also, it would be a bit better if we voted first what kind of platform, we are comfortable using although I have found MS teams to be alright. One surprising thing was how well the team meshed together quickly. Everyone had already chosen which task or part of the assignment they wanted to do. I think I have learned that communication and teamwork are the two things that will make any group succeed. By working together, we can find solutions that works best. We were all working towards a common goal.
